Song—"London Town," Stanard.
Ragtime—"The Ragtime," Stanard.
Spanish Berceuse (new), Stanard.
March—"The Athlete," Stanard.
"Hail Columbia," Fiske.

NEEDLEWORK NOVELTIES.

A somewhat uncommon idea is that of combining narrow lace edging with ribbon-work. Lace braid with ribbon-work is often seen, but the tiny lace put on full in rows or waved lines on sachets between sprays of ribbon flowers is altogether another thing. Here, for instance, is a lovely night-dress sachet. The shape is a large pocket without any flap. The design is worked in partitions, ribbon-work flower sprays being separated by rows of gold thread. Round about are festoons of very narrow Valenciennes lace, fully gathered, and caught up with bows. Between the double festoons lattice-work is seen and visible.

Quite unique is a table center, the French design of pipes and flowers being thrown up by the open net ground; festooned lace, gold appliques, fine colored chenille, and gold thread, enrich this decoration for a dinner table.

Brocades are still worked by hand with silks of harmonious coloring. For example, a pale green silk bears a design of scattered rosebuds; these are worked over with delicate tints of pink and there is a cushion cover for it for a queen. A modern silk cushion cover is decorated with trails of heliotrope, poppies, and forget-me-nots.

Another of pink brocade is ornamented with trellis work of reds and white silk and sprays of pink flowers, twisted into gold threads running between.

Ribbon work is also executed on linen grounds, cotton braid being introduced in the design. Cud covers are richly embroidered now. Mostly they are made of the finest white cloth or flannel. One has a center group of large chenille daisies. Around is a trellis of blue chenille, with a sprig in each open space, and twister or scrolls of white silk torchon.

WHAT NEXT? Crash that our grand-mothers delighted in for their dainties. Bed ticking tricked out in the wildest of reds and blues and posing along the sands as fashionable bathing attire. White tarpaulins considered for years the especial property of sea-beds, jeannee perched upon the heads of women who wear in winter now but violet hats. Butcher's linen beside which the finest of weaves must be neglected. Swiss footgear ready, it would seem, for a ball room spin, starting out for a morning tramp.

A woman's picture. The hour is 10 in the morning. Under a vine-clad porch stands a figure. The study is a conical one. A background of densely grown foliage throws into relief a slender figure, the softest of bathing suits. An odd straw hat is tilted over yellow curls and a skin as brown as an overdone coffee bean. Swung over one shoulder is a mandarin. The ribbon that holds it is one of the rarest of rare pink tones and is fastened to a degree of richness that makes it a masterpiece of the kind.

What a subject for a clever artist! "Honey boy" is crowned to the tinkle of the strings, while this summer skirt waits for her party to start shoreward. Philadelphia Inquirer.

KISSING IN THE STREETS.

HELMAGEN, a Romanian country town of 1,200 inhabitants, holds its annual fair on the first of August. On this occasion the place swarms with aristocratic brides from some sixty or eighty villages in the district, and the fair is a most interesting sight. The young women, who have taken fresh husbands remain at home.

The young women, in festive attire and generally adorned with flowers, carry bouquets of white-enriched flowers in their hands. They kiss almost every one they meet, and the fair is a most interesting sight. The young women, who have taken fresh husbands remain at home.

Not to partake of the proffered wine is regarded as an insult to the young wife and her family. She is therefore forced toward strangers, and only kisses those whom she thinks likely to taste her wine. The origin of the custom is not known. Some say that it dates back to the time when the Turks made frequent raids into Transylvania and carried away all the young women on whom they could lay hands.

Such of them as contrived to escape from captivity, happening to return to their native country, were regarded as specially blessed, and their remarkable immunity from lightning strokes. The statistics which have been compiled on the subject show that between 1800 and 1851 there was not a single death by lightning recorded in Paris, and that only one person out of each million that dies in London is taken off by a discharge from nature's electric battery. Between 1851 and 1896 only three persons were struck by lightning in Paris, and only one of these three cases resulted fatally, says the Parisian.

Women without hats.

TO BE negligee is to be considered smart. Women drive without hats. Under a canopy of lace may be seen the most bewitching of coiffures, not even a point of gauze to hide one out or braid. Women walk without hats. Along country roads and down on the strand are bare heads, a cunningly tilted dome of lace or chiffon the only bar to the sun's rays. Buds of social prominence wear with fetching grace the backwoods sunbonnet. In woody dells social queens wander in filmy robes with arms white as snow and necks that gleam beneath the gauze-like network of a demi-crochet. They look as if they had just stepped out of a frame. Girls flit by on their wheels, visions of trim loveliness. While, white from top to toe. The ham-mock-like synonym of luxurious negligee. The swings in the easiest of get-ups. This is her time for a jolly good rest, and you may depend there is nothing strait-laced about her methods. Philadelphia Inquirer.

BUCKLE DESIGNS.

THERE is a great bejeweled Egyptian buckle. It bears the name of "Cleopatra" to give it the due ancient Egyptian stamp. There is a buckle with a rosette in the center. The belt that goes with this buckle is a tawny ribbon, broad and Caledonian, and it is one of the most attractive of the many belts.
